Full-time chief heads department

A customized Michigan license plate hangs on the office wall of William Greenslait, 49, the new fire chief of Romulus. It says "Smoky," a name he was given after his first week on the Taylor Fire Department 26 years ago.

On Monday, Greenslait attended his own retirement party from the Taylor force where he served as battalion chief for the past year. On the same day, Mayor Beverly McAnally welcomed Greenslait as the first full-time fire chief in Romulus in several years.

Greenslait carries the extensive experience necessary for the growth and maintenance of the Romulus department, according to McAnally. While the Taylor force employs 42 full-time firemen and 55 auxiliary personnel, Romulus boasts a volunteer staff of 52.

"Romulus needs to do some recruiting. We are down about eight men and need to build up the force to the maximum," said Greenslait, who encouraged all residents to serve their community.

Greenslait was born in South Charleston, West Virginia but raised in Kentucky near Pikeville. After the war, his parents moved up north and he joined the Navy where he became a ship board firefighter. After traveling around the world during the Korean Conflict, he returned home and became a fireman on the Taylor force.

He and his wife, Jacqueline, celebrated their 28th anniversary last week. They have two sons and a daughter. The family recently moved from Taylor to a lake front home in Gibraltar.

Although never injured enough to require hospitalization, Greenslait has been injured in the line of duty and has fought several serious blazes. Among them was the Clark Oil fire which was finally brought under control after 24 hours. No lives were lost but billions of fuel gallons burned.

He intends to begin an intensive training of Romulus fire personnel beginning this fall. "My big thing is education and training. Let's make this a safer community by working together," he said.

Other priorities include new, more modern and larger equipment, enough to handle multiple story buildings, computerization of local business floor plans with hazardous chemicals noted and finally, a crack down on arsonists. "Let's get more convictions," he said.

He also intends to take one project of Lansing. "Fire services are provided by the city to help the taxpayers. Insurance companies give us nothing when we save a $60,000 home. We are protecting their investment as well. And I think we should be reimbursed," he stressed.

"I'm a traditional firefighter. The potential in this department is unlimited. We'll have to play day by day. One of my biggest assets is working with people," he said.

Fourth of July festivities slated

The Annual Fourth of July parade has returned to Romulus.

This Saturday, between the kick-off parade at noon and the spectacular fireworks at dark, residents of the city of Romulus and their friends will celebrate their annual city picnic at Elmer Johnson Park.

The community will gather for a day of festivities and entertainment. According to Debbie Dick, director of the Recreation Department, the parade starts from the city hall parking lot at Wayne Road and will continue down the established route along Goddard Road.

The parade is sponsored by both the city and the two local Veterans of Foreign Wars posts. "We are still accepting applications and probably will up until Saturday morning. We would like to have an idea of who's coming. So far there are close to 20 entries," Dick said.

Mayor Beverly McAnally added, "It doesn't have to be a big float. The purpose is to have lots of fun. Let's encourage the little neighborhood kids to decorate their bikes. That would be nice."

Softball games are scheduled for 2 p.m. Youth games are slated for 3:30 p.m. "We're looking for a disc jockey or band to play in the evening," added Dick.

The recreation department will also sponsor water games. Concessions will be provided. No alcohol will be sold, however, it is not banned from the park.

"The whole park is open for family picnics. Tables and barbecue pits are available," Dick said.

"The Fourth of July is an important national holiday. It's fitting the VFWs are involved. The military should have a major role. And of course, if the weather allows, the fireworks will explode at dark," McAnally said.

Romulus police car totalled after chase

While traveling at speeds of almost 100 miles an hour, the driver of a stolen vintage 1973 Corvette crashed into and demolished a Romulus patrol car while making a curve on Goddard Road last Wednesday.

Jeffrey Lazarski, 27, of Farmington Hills was arrested and later transported to Westland Medical Center for treatment of shoulder and head injuries sustained in the accident.

The Romulus police officer received minor cuts and bruises.

The incident occurred about 2:13 a.m. when two Romulus officers observed a blue 1973 Corvette with bright lights heading west on Ecorse near Middlebelt roads. A second vehicle with two subjects was following close behind.

The cars turned south on Middlebelt when Romulus police signaled the driver of the Corvette to pull over. About that time, police reported, the second car pulled along side a semi-truck and would not allow police to investigate.

Police were trailing the stolen car by about a quarter mile when the suspect turned west on Goddard Road and "paced at 100 miles an hour."

At the sharp right angle curve east of Vining Road, the driver lost control of the car and slid sideways about 300 feet before he struck a police car parked on the shoulder," a police spokesperson said.

The car had been reported stolen several minutes earlier from the All Around Lounge in Taylor.

The two other suspects, a 27-year-old male from Lincoln Park and a 23-year-old male from Wyandotte, from the other car were also arrested but names could not be released until arraignment.

Police noted that cars used in this situation are commonly called a "drop car" when individuals are brought out in one car to steal another.

Damage to the 1986 patrol car is estimated at between $7,000-8,000. Police were told the racing engine in the Corvette alone was worth $5,000.

In unrelated criminal activities: A Romulus resident was slashed several times with an eight-inch kitchen knife after an argument with another man who lives at the same address on Vinewood Street.

The incident occurred last Tuesday about 9:39 p.m. Shortly after, Robert Watkins, 59, was arrested on the scene and later charged with felonious assault, police reported. Watkins was arraigned in 34th District Court before Judge James Stone. Bond was set at $10,000 which was not posted. The suspect is lodged in Wayne County Jail. The victim is 40 years-old.

"The victim was slashed on the right side of his head, several times on his hand and other parts of his body. The argument was witnessed by a female friend," police said.

The two men had just returned from the Veterans of Foreign Wars Park on Wayne Road where they had been drinking.

Police are looking four white males in their late 30s suspected in a card scam at two local truck stops.

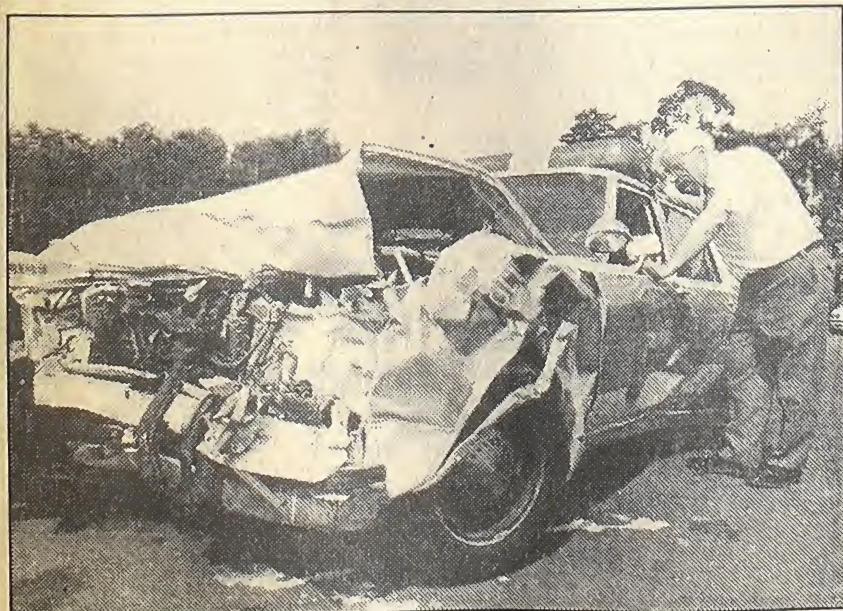

The suspects entice people into a game called "Three Card Molly." One face card is red and the two others are black. "They play a few good faith hands where somebody, usually one of the suspects are winning. As soon as an unsuspecting individual joins the game and bets their money, it's gone. In at least one instance, they grabbed the money and ran," police said.

The same men were identified during morning hours at three different areas around the airport and adjacent truck stops. In each instance, over $100 was taken. Similar police reports of the card scam by individuals fitting a similar description also came from Livingston County during the past week.

Community cleanup

Many neighbors and friends from around the city of Romulus assisted with the clean-up of Fernandez Park this past Saturday. Pictured above is Mae Ellen Jones who provided a helping hand. Even Mayor Beverly McAnally and Councilman Ellis Pennington were among the many who picked up brooms, rakes and shovels during the clean-up effort. Local residents Michael Woods and Lela Tennille spearheaded the drive. ANP photo by Guy Warren/staff photographer

New job training program set

By SHERRY WOODARD
ANP Staff Writer

A special job training commission that includes school districts in Canton, Wayne, Westland, Romulus and Inkster is well on the way to providing a new kind of education for laid off Metro Detroit workers.

The Metropolitan Education Commission was officially formed in April by Lansing lobbyist Gerald Dunn. Dunn represents a number of school districts in Wayne County.

Under his plan, large corporations and unions like General Motors and the United Auto Workers would pay the Metropolitan Education Commission to retrain or train its workers for various jobs. The commission would then hire its school district members to provide teachers and classrooms where the training would actually take place.

"Before this is all over about 250,000 people in the state will be jobless," Dunn predicted, commenting on recent layoffs by GM and other auto industry related businesses.

Another need to be addressed by the Metropolitan commission is that of providing information on just who in the area is providing job training.

"No one really knows what's going on," Dunn said. One of the first tasks of the commission will be to assess how many various agencies are offering training to workers.

An executive director, John Graves, formerly of the UAW-GM Resources Center and Rockwell Corp., has been hired to manage the projects of the commission.

Dunn predicts there may be millions of dollars in government and private money available, waiting to be spent on job training programs.

Money was his primary objective in putting together the Metropolitan Education Commission, because he sees it as a way of subsidizing the school districts for which he lobbies.

"If school districts can make extra money by retraining adult workers, then that's better than relying on property taxes and state aid," he said.

"I really think this will bring in enough money to offset the shortcomings in those two financial areas," Dunn said.

Whether or not school districts will have to spend money to hire job training instructors will "depend on the programs they will offer," the lobbyist said.

Early morning drizzle and overcast skies couldn't dampen the auction spirit.

Romulus history auctioned off to highest bidder

Helen Krueger

At the old pump are Crissy, 5, Krueger and her brother, Bradley, 4.

A major keystone in the path of Romulus progress has been sold. Last month, the contents of this local landmark went on the auction block. The Krueger farm on Wick Road was among the last and finest of the old city farm estates. This is, truly, the end of an era.

The farm was established almost 60 years ago by the Krueger family. The house was built in 1925. In 1932, Edward Krueger married Helen Waechter of Taylor. This has been her home ever since.

But this coming August, the final 10 acres of the original 70 will be history as bulldozers raze more than half a dozen buildings in preparation of the billion dollar development tentatively called, Metro Center.

Helen Krueger, 73, was widowed 30 years ago as the result of a farming accident. She and their two boys, Bob, 55, and Edward, 53 have carried on the family farming tradition ever since. The Kruegers now boast eight grandchildren.

Helen was born on Holland Road just over the Romulus-Taylor border. Edward was born in Dearborn. His family later moved into the old Sylvester place on Venoy Road. Both families were farmers.

Edward was a musician and, the couple met while he played in a local orchestra. For many years, he worked in the Edison Institute at Greenfield Village.

"He was a peach of a guy, well-liked and, he loved music," said Helen. "We were general farmers and raised mostly wheat, corn, soybeans and oats."

"The soil around here has always been good. It was nice living here. I loved the farm. I'll get used to living in the city. My neighbors do it and if they can do it so can I. You have to put your mind to it. Over 500 people came to the auction. There really was a lot of 'em," she said.

It was just a few years ago that the old barn burned during the middle of the night. By the time Helen awoke, the blaze was out of control. Kids started it, she said. "It was one of the most devastating things that ever happened here. I heard the noise and saw the flames. There was no way of saving it."

It was down the unpaved portion of Wick Road, with hardly a neighbor a mile on either side, in a small bungalow farm house shaded by towering maple trees and surrounded by flower gardens and plowed fields that the auction was conducted. Commercial and residential development as well as airport expansion loom over the horizon.

At 10 a.m. on Saturday, June 6, they started to gather. The auction summoned farmers and residents from all southeastern Michigan that attended the event. By the end of the day over 500 people would make their way to this Romulus oasis and cast their bids for the many possessions of the Krueger family. For many, it was a homecoming back to Romulus.

Over 500 people attended the Krueger house on the day of the auction.

"It was an exciting day. There was no time to be sad," said Helen. Just the day before she meticulously cut the entire lawn. But everybody who visited the Krueger farm shared her excitement.

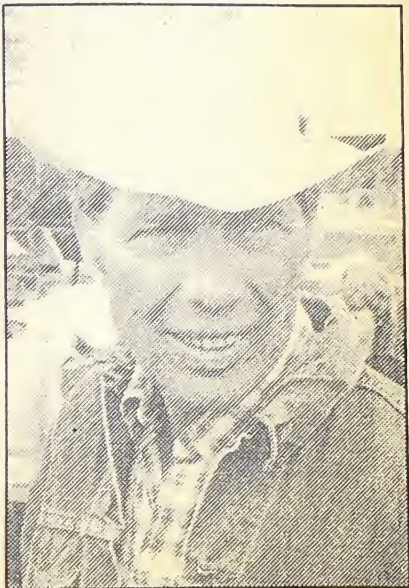

The auctioneer held up an old piece of wood furniture. He talked about the potential and possibilities for restoration. To one Romulus resident he asked, "Lady do you do any stripping?" The crowd roared with laughter.

By all accounts the occasion was happy and festive. And bargains were plentiful.

During the auction, Krueger watched everything from tractors, tools, butter churns, quilts, spittoons, dinner bells, hat racks, old advertising signs, 80-year-old magazines, and in all an accumulation of over 50 years farming living were sold in less than five hours.

"We were the last old timers on the road. I don't know what's planned for the area but I hope I'm around to see it," said Krueger. She has purchased a ranch home in Westland. "I hope there's room for a garden," she added.

She spoke several times with octogenarian Don Marentette, project developer. "He laughed and said he also hopes to live to see this project. He told me we all live from day to day. We can plan but the Lord decides," Helen agreed.

Edward Krueger

Brian Krueger, 2, asked his aunt, Carolyn Fick if she's been in farming very long.

Sale of several tractors sparked an interest in several local farmers.

A debt of gratitude

It's that time of year again. Perfectly normal area residents start to act just a little strange. They begin to crave cotton candy and to stretch the muscles of the arm normally reserved for throwing baseballs. Cowboy hats appear and the urge to consume vast quantities of hot dogs and candy apples is nearly irresistible. It's festival season.

This week it's the city of Westland hosting the annual Strawberry Festival. There will be rides and games and the infamous dunk tank along with bands and beauty queens. All in all, it will be a tribute to the city and to the people who live there.

Two weeks ago, Belleville reigned supreme with the annual Strawberry Festival. There were craft booths and the Strawberry Queen coronation, not to mention the parade and the appearance of Tom T. Hall to entertain those lucky enough to have filled up on strawberry pie and strawberry jam and strawberry ice cream and strawberry...well, you get the idea.

Wayne will have the annual Fall Festival and Canton recently celebrated their existence with the Canton Country Festival which, as usual, brought out every segment of the community to enjoy the rodeo and the fun and games behind township hall.

There will be Sumpter Days, the Huron Applefest, the 4-H Fair and Inkster will again be the site next year of one of the largest Memorial Day parades in the state.

Each of the surrounding communities has something very special to offer. Each takes pride in themselves and in the people who live there, work there and run their community. And each is supported, to a great extent, by the small businesses that serve them and support the festivals and donate to the events each year.

As for the volunteers, those tireless victims of civic pride and responsibility who each year devote untold hours and uncounted days to the organizing, publicizing and formation of these community services, there simply isn't enough to be said for them or about them.

These people provide the sense of community that every resident needs. They are responsible, whether they realize it or not, for a great many childhood memories that continue into the adulthood of many of the little ones who sit on the curbs and watch the parade go by. Or better yet, get to march in the procession with their scout troop or dance school. These people are providing roots, they are establishing an identity for their community and for everyone who lives there.

They are a rare breed, these volunteers. They deserve a real thank you from all of those who benefit from their work and efforts. These are the people, you see, who make where they live a community, a neighborhood and a home.

Thanks to each and every one of them. You can, indeed, be proud of a noble task, well done.

Citizen cops get a day off

You know what I absolutely, positively cannot stand? Citizen cops. You may not recognize them by this name but you have come in contact with them as sure as I'm writing this.

Citizen cops - CCs for short - are those people who take it upon themselves to tell you that you are not living out some minute detail of life in a way that satisfies them. They then proceed to tell you how you can correct this gross infraction upon their peace-of-mind. (And take my word for it, it is a small piece.)

Let me give you just one example of a CC: The woman in the grocery store who observes 14 items in your grocery cart and informs you that you should not be in the express lane.

Even though it is none of this person's business that you are two items in violation of the express lane limit, she still takes it upon herself to enforce a policy the grocery store attendants usually choose to ignore.

This very kind of Citizen cops' harassment once happened to me. I promptly asked the woman when had she begun her employment with Farmer Jack's and how much longer af-

sherry woodard speaking ter that had she received the title of "Manager In Charge of Express Lane Limits?"

A few customers around me snickered but the CC did not see the humor in my tart remark. She glared at me. A glare I felt burn into my back as I self-righteously took a step closer to the check out counter.

Another example of CC harassment occurred to me just the other day at a bank in Plymouth, where I have been a depositor for a year.

During that year I have walked into the bank building exactly once. That was when I opened my account. On every other trip to the bank I have used the drive through window service.

1: Because I am lazy and avoid unnecessary walks whenever possible. 2: Because I am almost always in a hurry.

On my most recent trip through the money drive-in, however, I noticed I had run out of checking account deposit slips. I asked the teller to send me some more so that I could complete my transaction.

She did so and I proceeded to fill out the form, taking longer than I have ever taken during my bank drive thrus.

Meanwhile, in back of me was a man in a huge gas guzzler - I think it was a Lincoln - who began honking his horn in impatience. He also pulled his car to within centimeters of the bumper of my compact car. No doubt it was a move calculated to intimidate me into abandoning my financial transaction for fear of being run over by his tank on wheels.

I calmly ignored the irate driver and chalked the experience up to another case of those pesky Citizen cops.

But to my surprise the bank teller turned out to also be a member of that worrisome order of un-deputized keepers of the law.

She informed me that I should have walked into the bank because my failure to zip through the window in 30 seconds or less had caused a fellow depositor to become upset.

Informed her that the irritation of the man behind me was no business of mine or hers. She disagreed and ordered me to

Resident wants traffic controls

To The Editor:

My name is Joe Galindo. I reside at 32080 Palmer, Westland. I am writing this letter to you to express my concern over a continuing problem on our street. I am also forwarding copies of this letter to the Westland Eagle and the Westland

City Council. My wife has earlier written to you voicing her concerns and our neighbor has contacted your office more than once.

Three months ago there was a major automobile accident in front of my house, which resulted in one car flipping over numerous times across my yard and the yard of my neighbor, before resting on the front lawn of my neighbor's home (suspected cause: lost control while attempting to pass a slower moving vehicle - definitely exceeding the 35 mph speed limit). This accident occurred on a warm, sunny Sunday afternoon; the type of day when many of our children were playing outside at the time of the accident, although my 6-year-old daughter was playing with the neighbor's 6-year-old girl in her bedroom (at my neighbor's home) only a few yards away from where the vehicle finally rested.

Last autumn, on a nice evening, another accident of a similar nature occurred, where the car came to rest on our front lawn after crossing over our neighbor's lawn (suspected cause: loss of control while attempting to pass on the shoulder - definitely exceeding the 35 mph speed limit). We were lucky that time also, that none of our children or neighborhood children were playing on the sidewalk or in the yard in front of our home or our neighbor's home.

Do we have to wait until someone (particularly a child) is hurt or even killed before something is done to stop these kinds of accidents?

We feel that there are a few steps that could be im-

Gastronomically speaking

Since childhood, we have been led to believe that there are four basic food groups that are "essential to good health and strong bones." Scientific research...okay, pedestrian observation...alright, it has occurred to me that it ain't so.

We have been told by nutritionalists that to stay well we should eat food from the following categories of nourishment: 1)dairy products 2)fruits and vegetables 3)meat, fish and poultry 4)wheat, oats, barley, and other grains. Sound familiar?

These alleged essentials provide, according to this obviously outdated line of thinking, calcium, vitamins, protein, and carbohydrates.

Well folks, I have made what must be a breakthrough discovery. We have been looking to the wrong areas for foods on which we, the human race, can stake our survival.

According to my newly created axiom, the four food groups on which we are at this very moment surviving are as follows: 1) sugar 2) Coca-cola 3) grease, and the most important of all, 4) chocolate!

Some have suggested that our bodies subconsciously know what is best for us and hunger for and seek what we are lacking. Tell me, have you ever heard of anyone having an insatiable urge for brussel sprouts?

We are also blessed with the superior corporate minds of America who obviously know what's best for us. Why else would they fill every street corner with fast-food restaurants that cook virtually everything in saturated animal fats?

The entertainment industry certainly is looking out for the health and well being of all Americans as well. How often have you gone to a movie theater, concert, fair or carnival and been asked if you would like some fresh avocado dip to go with your vegetable sticks and fruit salad?

Now, you understand that this is only a theory. There are certain flaws in my logic which I have not yet fully found arguments to overcome.

As an example, one might suggest that the high incidence of heart attacks, strokes and related deaths is directly linked to the high usage of animal fats in our cooking and eating habits.

That would be just as absurd as suggesting that the PTL Club is bad for organized religion, that tobacco leads to lung cancer, or that alcohol causes intoxication. Hmmm.

Gee-whiz, maybe there is something to all this nutrition nonsense. But why then does our society market things that are bad for us, and make them so available and enticing.

Why is it then that we find so much cute, attractive, pretty and downright sexy advertising for food products that are not really good for our health?

Now you certainly understand that this newspaper, as all media, relies almost exclusively on advertising dollars. Some of those aforementioned dollars are from restaurants, party stores, grocery stores, food manufacturers and others who sell the very products that contribute to our illnesses.

I obviously am for advertising and all that it entails. The fact is, people out there make a living giving the public what they want. The more they demonstrate a desire to want it, the more the advertising world gears itself to make the public want it even more. It's their job.

Mercifully Americans, many of us have become far more health conscious in the last few years, and slowly the food folks are starting to gravitate toward menus that better serve the health of America. The entrepreneurs of the french fry world will quickly change gears and serve asparagus burgers and sun ripened cucumbers the day the public decides that that's what they want.

The issues are not as clear cut as we might like to believe, or greater pressure would be demonstrated legislatively to take products off the market, thereby removing the sources of disease, illness and suffering related to diet.

Pizza, hamburgers, tacos, and the like.

Sumpter supports road plan

Sumpter officials are willing to support a new plan to fund road improvements, but they would like to see an equitable share of the money used for the resurfacing of local roads.

Henry Lundquist of the Wayne County Office of Public Services presented the strategy for road funding to the Sumpter Township Board. The plan includes hiking the fuel tax by two cents each year for the next three years, increasing the Michigan Transportation Fund by 15 percent and creating an Economic Development Fund.

The fund, according to Lundquist, would support three equally funded programs: future road development with a minimum of 25 percent going to counties with less than 400,000 population, trunkline takeover programs to enlarge the state trunkline system and capacity improvement program to reduce road congestion in urban areas.

Lundquist noted that it has been estimated that the cost of county road needs over the next decade will exceed available revenue by more than $500-million. The proposed plan is needed, he said, to keep pace with the increased demands for road improvements.

Township Clerk Joan Oddy told Lundquist, "We can't cross one end of the township to another on a paved road." She also noted that Martinsville Road, the site of a 430-unit mobile home park, also had not been paved. Numerous other roads have been slated for paving but have not been done, she said.

Trustee Karl King said he had bought a home in a Judd Road subdivision 30 years ago and is "still waiting" for the road to be paved as promised.

Boy Scouts earn Eagle rank

Two Belleville Scouts have attained the rank of Eagle Scout in the past two months.

Earning the honors were Brian Campbell, 16, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Campbell and Michael Teall, 15, the son of Norbert and Helen Teall. Both are members of Troop 924 based at Elwell School.

A May 2 ceremony and dinner honored Brian for his achievement. He has been a Scout for eight years. Brian earned the Arrow of Light award as a Cub Scout and as a Boy Scout, the Belleville High school sophomore earned 11 required merit badges, 10 elective merit badges plus an additional seven merit badges. He has held the offices of senior patrol leader, assistant senior patrol leader, troop quartermaster and scribe. Brian currently is in the Leadership Corps, a member of the Order of the Arrow and is the troop librarian.

The ceremony was chaired by Detroit Area Council Commissioner Doug Beard. Proclamations were received from State Rep. Lynn Owen, Senator William Faust and Wayne County Commissioner Milton Mack. Plaques honoring Brian were presented from Sumpter Township Treasurer John Morgan and Clerk Joan Oddy and Carol Parrish, Elwell P.T.O. president. Letters of congratulation were received from President Ronald Reagan, Vice President George Bush and Gov. James Blanchard.

Brian's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bokon of Belleville and Elizabeth Campbell of Westland.

Brian Campbell

Michael Teall

On March 9, Michael Teall was honored at an Eagle Court of Honor at Elwell School.

Michael, a sophomore at Belleville High School, earned 22 merit badges.

Among those present at the ceremony were Rep. Lynn Owens who presented a plaque to the honoree. Sumpter Township Treasurer John Morgan and Clerk Joan Oddy also presented a plaque to Michael and a proclamation from Wayne County Commissioner Milton Mack was delivered by his representative. Letters of congratulations were received from the President Reagan, Vice President Bush, Cong. William Ford, Gov. James Blanchard and Sen. Carl Levin.

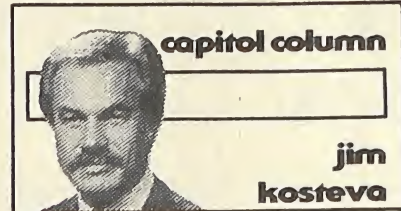

Licensing to aid consumers

Licensing and regulation laws for service industries help protect Michigan consumers from unscrupulous individuals and firms. Under state law, accountants, barbers, morticians, physicians, realtors and many other kinds of professionals must be licensed by the state in order to conduct business. Some proposed House legislation would establish licensing and regulation in other areas that need attention.

For instance, a bill has been introduced to regulate quick weight loss programs. A growing body of research shows that serious health risks can result from medically unsound weight loss regimens. These kinds of programs, often promoted by individuals with no health training, who do not offer individual assessment or supervision of their clients, can result in serious health problems or even death. In spite of this, there is little or no regulation of weight loss businesses or products.

The proposed regulations would apply to commercially offered diets that:

- include a controlled dietary product and a daily intake of under 801 calories
- contain less than the federal recommended levels of certain nutrients, and

capitol column

- are aimed at a weight loss of five or more pounds in any seven day period after the first week.

Proponents of the measure say that reputable weight loss programs that adhere to sound medical practices would not be affected by the proposed regulations, which are designed to protect Michigan residents against potentially life-threatening commercial diets.

A regulatory bill recently passed by the House addresses a problem that has plagued college sports for some time and has grown more serious in recent years. Unscrupulous athletic agents use gifts and promises of financial rewards to persuade young athletes to leave college for a career in professional sports. Too often, however, because of injuries or other unforeseen circumstances, the promised career never materializes and the agents cut the young athletes loose with no education and severely limited prospects.

The bills would require all professional athletic agents to be registered in order to conduct business in Michigan. An agent would have to be trained in the field of contracts, complaint resolution, arbitration or other relevant areas. In addition to registering, professional athletic agents would have to post a $25,000 surety bond to cover damages caused to a client by deceitful or unlawful representation. The bill specifies jail time and substantial fines for a person who offers money or other remuneration to entice a student athlete to sign with a professional team while still playing college sports, while student athletes who solicit or accept gifts in exchange for sports participation could face a civil penalty of $1,000 or more.

Other licensing and regulation bills being considered by the House have to do with nursing homes and food service companies that provide services to Michigan residents. Members of the licensed professions recognize that these laws protect their own reputations as they protect the consumer from unethical and incompetent individuals.

Roberta Hodge with Fuss, her pet cat

Hodge is named July carrier of the month

Roberta Hodge, 13, of Westland has been chosen as the Associated Newspaper Carrier of the Month.

Roberta, a ninth-grader at Stevenson Junior High, Westland, is the daughter of Mike and Roberta Hodge, of South Berry Street, Westland.

In three months, Roberta has taken a small sample route and built it to 70 paying costumers.

"We are lucky to have her working for the Associated Newspapers," praised Byron Spencer, circulation director at the ANP.

"She is an extremely nice girl, who is very business-minded and a pleasure to work with."

Roberta, who also babysits for neighbors, enjoys horseback riding and skating.

"I go skating every Saturday, it's a lot of fun," said Roberta, who also is a big fan of animals. "I have a mouse, a Ginny pig and a cat named Fuss."

Boy fights city hall to keep pet duck

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

A 12-year-old Westland boy doesn't want to "duck" the law, but he is hoping to bend a city ordinance to allow him to keep his pet without running afoul of the law.

Michael Shropshear of Hazelwood Street was notified by a city ordinance officer last week that his pet duck, Daffy, did not comply with the city code and was ordered to get rid of the duck by June 29.

"At first, I thought I'd just have to send Daffy to a farm, but then I decided to fight it," Michael said. "Daffy doesn't have any fear of people or animals and I'm afraid he wouldn't last long out in the country."

Michael, with the assistance of neighbors, has collected signatures from Hazelwood residents on a "Save Daffy Duck" petition which he plans to present to Westland officials.

Like many pets that are raised exclusively by humans, Daffy Duck seems to regard himself as "one of the family" rather than as a waterfowl.

"He's quiet and doesn't bother anyone," Michael said, "and a lot of people like to come by and feed him or watch him play in the yard. If neighbors go to the ice cream place on the corner and they don't see Daffy in the yard, they ask about him."

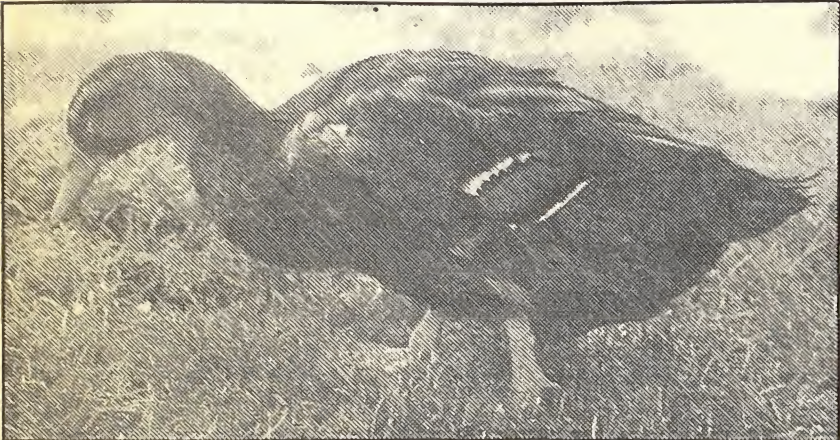

Michael's mother bought the duck for him a week before Easter and the tiny duckling slept in Michael's room with him when he first came to the Shropshear house. Now Daffy waddles into the backyard in the early evening to sleep in his pen.

"Some of the things I really like about Daffy are the way he comes when I call him by name and how he jumps up to take pieces of bread from my hand," Michael said. "Daffy makes noises like he's talking to me and he tilts his head and looks at me when he 'talks.'"

Michael and his friends understand the necessity of banning flocks of poultry from residential areas, but they don't believe that a lone pet duck should pose a problem for city dwellers.

Don't take Fido's physician for granted

Do you take your veterinarian for granted? I bet you do.

We all have taken our family doctors for granted at one time or another, so why not the other important physician in our life?

Most of who take our dog to the vet for shots or heartworm tests would prefer an hour-long conversation on how wonderful our particular dog is and hope the doctor confirms this by numerous compliments. Of course, when you take the dog in, is it in good condition? Is it clean and well-behaved? Even when you realize your dog is filthy because it ran through the mud on the way into the veterinarian's office, do you bother to wipe off the dog's feet or do you let the dog mess a once-shiny and disinfected floor with mud? Or, worse yet, let the dog jump on the office furniture?

When it's your turn to see the doctor, is your dog easy to examine or must it be muzzled? Does your dog growl or snarl at the person whose sole occupation is to help it?

Your veterinarian chose a very difficult occupation. In effect, he has to be a mind reader because his patient cannot verbally communicate with him. The vet has to rely on the uneducated guess of the dog's possible ailment given by a third party - the owner. Of course, anyone who takes good care of his dog will be able to point out differences in the dog's eating habits or behavior, and obviously any wound would be noticeable. It's the diagnosis and treatment of the smallest ailment or injury that sets the vet apart from all of us.

You should make certain your dog gives the veterinarian the respect of good manners. Just as you would caution your children to behave correctly toward their pediatrician, so should your dog behave accordingly toward his specialist.

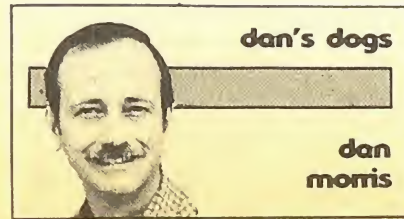

Your veterinarian has an enormous responsibility to administer help to an animal that may, in turn, bite the hand that helps it.

Just as children dread visiting the doctor's office when they know they'll be needing an inoculation, your dog senses your apprehension when he is given a shot, too.

Try being on the veterinarian's side. Take a well-behaved dog into his office and keep in mind he is there to help your pet. Help make a very stressful occupation that much easier for the doctor in whose hands with all their negative attributes, eaten on the run by people on the go, are better for us than skipping meals because we "don't have time."

Many of the "right foods" bring to us problems of their own such as mercury contamination in fish and infected chickens.

Eggs contain cholesterol, meat, no matter how it is prepared, clogs up our arteries, and vegetables and fruits are sprayed and preserved in order to get to us "fresh".

The bottom line to all of this is that it is an imperfect world...and every choice involves a loss. We choose a life style and often, as a direct result, eating habits that fit it.

The best advice one can get is to take care of your health, think about what kind of food you are putting in that fuel tank you call a stomach, and seek foods that are good for you.

Generally, anything in moderation can be survived, from gummy bears to alcohol. It is the steady diet of everything that is wrong that generally gets us into trouble.

I have tried a balanced diet. I have attempted to live on fudge, coke, ice cream and potato chips, and I have attempted to become a vegetarian. I was never able to perfect any of the aforementioned disciplines.

Here's to an imperfect world. May we enjoy and make the best of it. Care for a little chocolate on your fruit salad?

See you next week.

plemented immediately to help prevent a disastrous accident and may even save the life of one of our precious children:

Place two stop signs at the intersection of Palmer and Northgate; one on eastbound Palmer and one on westbound Palmer at Northgate.

Paint double-yellow "no passing" striping along Palmer Road, between Merriman and Venoy.

Place "No Passing On Shoulder" signs at key locations along Palmer.

Increase law enforcement along this stretch of Palmer; residents know many cars travelling down Palmer are not only exceeding the 35 mph speed limit, but even reaching speeds of 50 mph and 60 mph; illegally passing cars turning into driveways and onto Northgate is also a common, everyday occurrence.

Please let me know what definite plans there are in the works to correct this situation. I think I speak for all the concerned citizens on my street when I say we want something done as soon as feasible to prevent any more disasters.

Thank you for your time.

walk into the bank the next time I was not supplied with deposit slips.

At that point I gave up the argument. Two CCs at a time is more than even I, a veteran of their annoying enforcements, can handle.

The point I want to make is this. During this week in which we will all celebrate our independence from the Great Britain that sought to restrict the freedoms of our forefathers and foremothers, let's all make a concerted effort to free ourselves from Citizen cops.

The best way to do this is to ignore them. (Take it from a woman who has tried every snappy comeback in the book, nothing offends a CC like ignoring them.)

But if you must say something to them, then look at them sweetly, smile brightly and say: "Let me wish you a happy Fourth of July. And in case you did not realize it, this is a national holiday. That means that all of you xx%&$xx Citizen cops have the day off.

Romulus couple enjoys the luxuries

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

On his 87th birthday last year, Frank Andrews of Romulus bought a brand new 1987 white Lincoln. After all, this is America.

Andrews was born in Cornwall, England, 20 miles from the legendary castle of King Arthur and his knights of the round table and 40 miles from where the Pilgrims set sail for America.

After he served his required time in the British army during World War I, he joined his sister in Calumet in the upper peninsula of Michigan. He has considered himself an American ever since.

Today, he lives in a ranch home on two beautiful acres along Barth Road. "I've got a nice place here. And as long as I've got Rhada, it'll stay that way. What more can you ask," said Andrews who glances at Rhada, 70, his wife of 43 years.

The couple met by chance shortly after each had moved to Highland Park during the 1920s. Rhada came from the hills of Tennessee, not far from Fort Henry, the site of a major Civil War battle. They have three children, four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

"And they're all proud of their heritage," said Rhada. The Andrews family regularly visits both England and Tennessee. Rhada's mother just turned 95 and still lives back home. her father was a framer. His father was a coal miner.

"When I was a young girl during the war, sugar was scarce. I remember my grandfather taking the steamboat down the river to Louisiana and coming back with a couple hundred pounds of sugar.

"He said our family name was English, but as far back as anybody remembers everybody lived in the United States.

On a small tour through their modest home, visitors might see a luscious garden with not a single weed in sight. An old-fashioned dinner bell towers above and the path to the front door is lined with budding roses. Numerous perennial flowers surround towering trees. In the garage next to the white Lincoln are three deep freezers, full to capacity, one filled with fruits, the other with meats and a third with vegetables.

"Where else but in America," added Frank.

"Because we have the right to voice our opinions, we have a responsibility to keep ourselves aware of what's going on around us."

Teens admire Constitutional freedom

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

Lisa Ericson

What do the teens of today think about American freedom? According to Lisa Ericson, a student at Wayne Memorial High School, freedom isn't something that her peers think much about.

"Freedom is something that we've always had. We've always been given the opportunity to voice our opinions, to refuse to do certain things, to be our own people. So it really isn't something that people discuss on a daily basis."

Ericson, who will be a senior at Wayne High in the fall, said that, unless there are news issues that deal specifically with the question of freedom, it isn't ever brought up.

"It isn't as though teens don't know about the Constitution, it's just that they really take it for granted," said Ericson.

Ericson added that citizens' involvement is one of the keys to holding on to the freedom that we have in this country.

"People should get more involved and make things happen, because this is the place that they can do it. We are given the right to elect our own officials, both locally and nationally, yet often, we hear about low voter turnout and things like that. Every citizen, young and old, must stay actively involved, especially in political affairs. Because we have the right to voice our opinions, we have a responsibility to keep ourselves aware of what's going on around us. America is a great country, and I don't think that any teenager could argue with that."

Coming to America offered promise

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

The reasons that prompted Harold and Irene Brownlee to leave the British Isles almost 40 years ago seem to typify the motives of the majority of "Americans by choice."

Brownlee, a native of northern Ireland, and his wife, "who lived in the town with the broadest street in England," came to the U.S. for the chance to earn a better living for themselves and their family and to give their children the opportunity to gain a better education.

The couple believe that the same opportunities exist for people today "who want to work and get ahead."

They feel that they have reached their goal in both areas. During their working years, both of the Brownlees "earned a decent living" and their son, David, is now a supervisor at the G.M. Hydromatic Plant at Willow Run and their daughter, Celia Mydlarz, is a secretary with the Jackson Public Schools.

"I was raised on a farm in northern Ireland and we depended on the weather to earn a living," Brownlee said. "We hoped for good weather, but mostly had bad weather."

Brownlee was serving with the Royal Air Force during World War II when he met his wife. Since Brownlee had three brothers in the U.S. and four family members in Canada, he became interested in "crossing the Atlantic" himself. He also had spent some time in Canada for a rest period during the war.

He and his wife and infant daughter arrived in New York on Christmas Eve in 1947 and the Brownlee family moved to various cities in Delaware and New Jersey before locating in Michigan. Brownlee worked for Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac in the East and then worked for Mills Bakery and Awrey Bakery as a driver-salesman for 22 years.

Brownlee finds it difficult to pin down a retirement date "because I retired several times." He now enjoys golfing and gardening in the summer months and bowling during the remainder of the year.

Irene Brownlee worked at A&P stores throughout the area for 20 years.

JUDGES GIVE OPINIONS ON FREEDOM

Responsible freedom is essential

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

Westland District Court Judge Gail McKnight believes that American freedom goes hand-in-hand with responsibility.

"American freedom is a wonderful thing, but all too often, people don't realize that there is a great deal of responsibility that comes with it. We all have an obligation to take part in our own social systems."

McKnight added that it is wrong for people to simply allow other people to handle everything.

"I don't think that everybody is doing their part to fully utilize the unlimited freedom that we have. We need a heightened sense of social responsibility toward freedom."

Because judges have an obligation to remain impartial, McKnight said that she is not in the position to state her opinions on any issues that come up.

"It is my job to interpret and enforce the law. Judges give up their freedom to form and express opinions, we must remain neutral."

McKnight said she regards the Constitution as a "living document," that she feels will continue to change in order to meet the needs of the times.

As far as her feelings toward the judicial system, McKnight said that she thinks it's a good system and that it works well, because all people, regardless of sex, race, or income, are, by law, entitled to a fair trial. McKnight said that this is something that is not possible everywhere in the world.

McKnight said that the experience of having to be expelled at a roadblock in Northern Ireland for routine questioning and a search a few years ago made her realize just how lucky we are in America.

"Our American freedom is so unusual, compared with the rest of the world. It is so taken for granted in this country. If we continue to do that, and we don't exercise our ability to use that freedom, our entire system will become weaker."

Judge: 'Love it or leave it'

Judge John McDonald of the Plymouth-Canton 35th District Court takes a "love-it-or-leave-it" view of America.

The various systems that ensure justice and individual rights in the United States are the best he has seen, McDonald said.

"I'm very satisfied. I just got back from Europe and I wouldn't trade our system for their system," he said.

The freedoms and protections extended to Americans cannot be beat, the judge emphasized.

His stay abroad was in Spain and Portugal and the government there was more "strict, too restrictive," McDonald said.

"For instance, it is much harder for you to start out there with nothing and rise above it all," he said. In this country, the spirit of entrepreneurship is an ideal that is realized by millions every day.

McDonald has been on the bench for almost three years at 35th District Court and during that time he has seen many people who are angry at "the system," he said.

That is understandable, he explained, because "when you are in the wrong you may tend to blame someone else."

He makes sure an angry defendant has not been denied any of the rights or procedures due him under the law, the judge said.

As for shortcomings in the American judicial system, McDonald said, there needs to be "more judges, more finances in the courts and we need more jails."

Stardust Lounge knows the secret of barbecue

By RAY DAY
ANP Managing Editor

Okay, I admit it. When I was urged to do a restaurant review on a dancing and entertainment establishment, I was a bit skeptical. After all, the bars I had to this point visited were adept at only the fine art of making popcorn, and many times even that dish was foiled in one way or another.

When approaching the Stardust Lounge on Inkster Road in Inkster, my skepticism grew even greater. It looked like a bar to me. The inside of the business looked dark, and my very hungry stomach was doing somersaults as I contemplated yet another typical bar cold hamburger, almost unfrozen-frozen french fries and popcorn that someone apparently had ordered to be "well done." But was I in for a surprise.

Once inside there was no mistaking it. Stardust is for the dancing, entertainment-loving and drinking crowd. Clearly, this place wasn't designed for mom and dad to bring junior and his sister for their family-style dinner. No, the lights overhead and multitude of tables signaled a real-life entertainment facility, complete with stage, sound system and, of course, a bar poised in the middle of all the action.

Owners Pat and Dorsey Williams filled me in quickly on the history of Stardust. The two purchased the bar about 10 years ago and have worked aggressively to remodel the interior and convert what was once a bad reputation into an image as one of the hottest spots in the area to party and dance.

Pat, 36, was born in Detroit and for several years worked as an accountant for one of the automakers credit corporations. But after years of counting other people's money, Pat said she decided she would rather count her own, and the legacy of the Stardust Lounge can speak for itself.

But above all of the remodeling and refurbishing, the Williams have added one ingredient that has made the facility a sure hit for bar lovers. The food. There are only four menu items, but I guess four are all that you need when the four are so taste-tempting.

First came the corned beef sandwich. Stacked atop a fresh onion roll was the corned beef. Juicy, flavorful. And lots of it.

Next came the shrimp. This was my photographer's favorite dish, and fighting him in order to "truly obtain a lasting impression of this dish so I could write my review" - okay, so I was being greedy - was a difficult task. Hot, crunch batter, not-too overpowering shrimp sauce. No wonder my photographer has since indicated an interest in a diet plan.

Third came the rib tips. I have to admit - I am no rib lover. Put the word barbecue on it, and that's my cue to not order it. But as any good food reviewer would do, I sampled everything, including the ribs. Boy, am I glad I did.

Dorsey said the ribs featured his special sauce. Clearly he wasn't lying. This sauce isn't that cheap tomato-laden, ketchup-tasting barbecue sauce I have come to hate. No, Dorsey's sauce made these the best ribs I have yet to eat. And as a special treat, the restaurant owner added some Cognac to a second batch of ribs - you can see how much I hated them - a treat he reserves for only special occasions.

Finally, I sampled the chicken wing dings. Although up to par by the standards of wing dings, there was none of that special Williams-style flair that made me so fond of the other dishes. Don't get me wrong. The chicken was good, but the taste of corned beef will linger in my mind far longer.

Dorsey tells me that my fondness for the corned beef is not unique. The most popular dish at Stardust, the corned beef sandwich sells for $3. The wing dings also go for $3, while the special rib tips sell for $4.50.

staff photographer

But that's $4.50 of pure heaven for anyone who likes barbecued ribs.

Another dish, Italian sausage, goes for $2.25. There was no sampling of the sausage during my visit.

Oh yes, I almost forget. Stardust Lounge is a bar. Unmistakably. My mixed drink was superb, as was my now shrimp-stuffed photographer's. Clearly good taste can be found in both the kitchen and at the bar.

Stardust is open from noon to 2 a.m. Wednesday through Saturday. Periodic entertainment is provided by local bands and personalities, including John Arnold and Crazy Willie who play each Friday.

Stardust Lounge is located at 3736 Inkster Road, south of Michigan Avenue, Inkster. You can reach the Williams or manager Eugene "Bumper" Douglas at 277-3810.

For combing fine food with live entertainment in a bar atmosphere, I would recommend the Stardust Lounge.

Get the boss' attention

SELF-EVALUATION WITH EMPLOYER WORKS!

INTERVIEW SYNOPSIS:

SMT wanted to get her boss's attention. She was feeling very insecure about her job and her value to the company. We stuck our necks out and sent the president of the company the following letter.

Dear Mr. M:

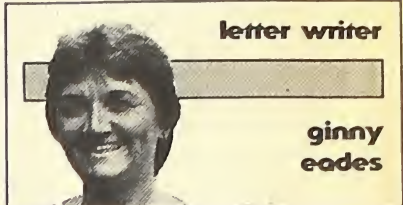

Thank you very much for your time and interest regarding my concerns as an employee of your company.

I have prepared the following self-evaluation so that we have a common ground on which to speak. It is important that you know from the onset that I very much value my position. I am initiating this discussion process so that I may have a clearer understanding of my value (or weakness) to the company and some certainty for personal career advancement.

As you know, my present job title is personal systems manager and assistant controller. In addition to effectively performing on a day to day basis, I have...

- Taken on additional responsibilities, when needed.
 - Always exhibited an eagerness to learn and grow.
 - Been punctual and worked later until the "job was done."
 - Made deliveries after-hours to assure timely payroll.
 - Been flexible and grown with the company both in systems and procedures and in product knowledge.
 - Communicated and worked well with my colleagues.
 - Assisted vendors in the resolution of problems.
- Most importantly, I am company-minded and care a great deal about the growth, reputation and welfare of the company.

My present concern and frustration lies in my feelings of insecurity regarding my position. I would like to begin a communication with you more frequently and request that a regular semi-yearly or yearly evaluation program be set up. I would appreciate an increase in my hourly wage and a guaranteed percentage of raise after one year, together with regular evaluations.

Again, please know that I am a highly-competent employee and wish to consistently increase my value to the company. I would welcome additional responsibilities and, of course, the opportunity for any additional training.

I look forward to talking with you at your convenience.

Sincerely, LMT

COMMENTS:

LMT and her boss got together and a meeting of the minds took place.

How many times have you felt like you were in limbo in a given situation? This type of letter clears the air, opens up communication and lets you know where you stand.

Your responses to my column are appreciated. Please continue to keep in touch with me at 42245 Ann Arbor Road, Suite 109LL, Plymouth, Mich. 48170, 455-8892 or 35540 W. Michigan Ave., Suite 206, Wayne, Mich. 48184, 326-0060.

Romulus couple cook up traditional Polish favorites

"My wife is an excellent cook, and she cooks the old-world way. Here, try this deer sausage."

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Remember when grandpa made head cheese and blood sausage from unidentifiable parts of a pig's head, feet, tail etc. He might say, "Eat it, it's good for you," or "it'll put hair on your chest," or "give you better eyesight." He'd say anything to have you sample these unusual looking old world favorites.

Other family members might say, "Grab the Alka Seltzer." Romulus residents Josephine and Ed Molenda of Hannan Road still prepare these ethnic dishes handed down from Polish ancestors but with a slightly modern twist.

"We use the better parts of the pig," said Ed who built this house on 10 acres back in 1946, when a years' taxes were $50. There was already an old barn, a chicken coop, root cellar and two out-house buildings. He has since added a smoke house and divided the property to accomodate three other houses. Last year, the family hooked up to city water for the first time.

"A couple of bachelors with long beards that looked like the Smith Brothers lived on this old farm," they added.

Both Josephine and Ed were childhood sweethearts born and raised in the same Polish neighborhood around St. Hedwig's Church in Detroit where they were married in 1939. They have been active in church affairs ever since.

They were among the first families to join St. Aloysius Church in Romulus and remember when crosses were burnt on the lawn of the first pastor, and area residents threatened him with an ax. "We got enough ministers around here," they said.

For the past 35 years, Josephine as dinner chairperson has organized the food preparation for the annual St. Aloysius Festival over Labor Day weekend.

And while her spaghetti dinners are legendary and served religiously only on Monday, Labor Day, most area residents agree, it is her fabulous five course chicken dinner served on Saturday that they wait for each year with mouth watering delight.

"It's a steady job and, I've got a lot of helpers. The work must be divided. We cook 500 chickens, 600 pounds potato salad, 8-10 bushels of green beans and 50 loaves of bread for dressing. We make 300 home-made apple pies. We start cooking weeks ahead of time," said Josephine.

Often during festival time in the church kitchen, Ed will bring some homemade brandy for the cooks to sample. The color is a crystal clear burgundy at about 40-50 proof.

"There's a million different ways to make it. Instead of the old bootleg way, I buy special fruit syrup, like cherry, raspberry, blueberry, or a combination and add to a fifth of vodka, 50/50. It's simple," said Ed.

"My wife is an excellent cook, and she cooks the old world way. Here try this deer sausage," he said as he offered a visitor a sample.

Josephine and Ed Molenda display their Polish delicacies.

FOR THE POLISH PALATE

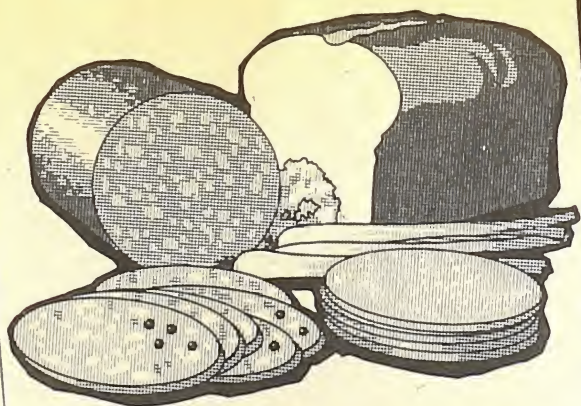

Polish Seven-Day Crock Pickles

1 peck fresh clean pickling 3-4 inch cucumbers
1 cup salt
4 cloves garlic
1 bunch fresh dill
6 slices Polish Rye Bread with hard crust
3 gallons warm water
In crock layer the bottom with bread, dill, garlic and cucumbers. Mix salt and water and pour over cucumbers. Add with more dill and cover with plate weighted down with stone. Keep in warm place for about one week. Take pickles out and put in gallon jar. Drain the brine and strain in colander. Keep pickles refrigerated.

Fudge Brownies

4 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 cup margarine or soft butter
4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sifted flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 cups chopped walnuts
Melt chocolate with margarine in double boiler, and set aside. Beat eggs well and gradually add sugar until fluffy yellow in color, approximately 10 minutes. Stir in vanilla and melted chocolate. Blend in flour, salt and walnuts. Pour in 9 X 13 X 2 greased pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes. Cut in squares and cool.

Frosting
1/2 cup Nestles Quick powdered chocolate
1/4 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 box sifted powdered sugar

Pour hot water over chocolate and stir well. Cream butter and add chocolate and vanilla. Mix well. Optional, either/or, sprinkle powdered sugar over brownies.

Polish Sauerkraut

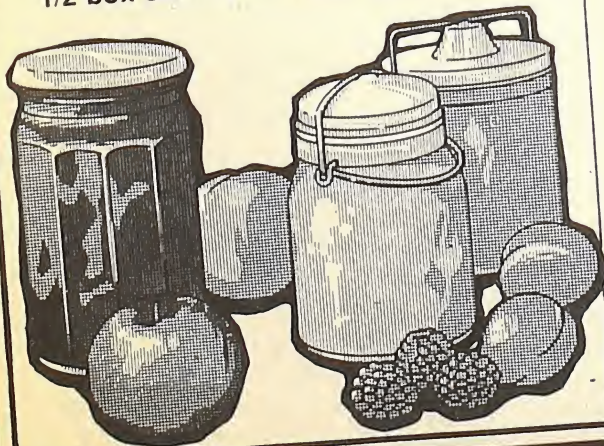

For large quantity:
1 gallon sauerkraut
1 pound bacon sliced thin
3 medium onions chopped
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar

Cover sauerkraut with hot water and cook 20 minutes. Drain well. Fry bacon until crispy. Remove bacon and saute onions in bacon drippings until transparent. Mix sauerkraut with bacon, onions, salt and sugar. Mix well. Place mixture in covered baking dish. Bake 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Pickled Corned Beef, 7-10 days

5 tablespoons quick cure
2 1/2 cups brown sugar or honey
4 cloves crushed garlic
2 tablespoons mixed spices
1 1/2 cups salt
1 gallon cold water
10 pounds fresh beef brisket

In 5 gallon plastic pail, mix cure, sugar or honey, garlic, spices, salt and water. Pour over meat. Prick the meat every third day and turn it. Must be refrigerated for 10 days. Take meat out of brine and rinse in cold water and put meat in pot covered with cold water. Add stalk celery, two carrots and two cloves garlic. Bring to boil and simmer for 3-4 hours. Cook until tender, just in like a delicatessen.

WEDDINGS

Wagner – Zatirka

Kelly Marie Wagner and Alan David Zatirka were married April 25 at St. Anthony Catholic Church, Belleville.

The bride is the daughter of Joseph and Charlene Wagner of Belleville. The groom is the son of Raymond and Alice Zatirka of Belleville.

The Rev. Mitchell Bednarski performed the afternoon double-ring ceremony in the church, which was decorated with large white bows, pink carnations and pink roses.

The bride chose a long white formal gown of satin, with a 6-foot train, high neckline, lace and applique bodice and puff sleeves, trimmed with hand-sewn pearls and sequins and a hem edged in scalloped lace. Her fingertip-length veil was trimmed with silk flowers and pearls on a face-framing headpiece. Her bouquet consisted of pink and white mini carnations, white roses, baby's breath and trailing ivy. She was given away by her father and mother.

The maid of honor was Stacy Nedwid of Westland. Bridesmaids included Dawn

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Zatirka

Wagner and Sharon Zatirka. The attendants' dresses were of pink taffeta in a floor-length design, their headpieces were floral wreaths.

Best man was Jim Roberts of East Jordan. Ushers included Joey Smedra, Steve Zatirka, Joey Wagner and John Evans.

The bride's mother chose a pink chiffon street-length gown with a gardenia corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore a mauve chiffon street-length dress with a gardenia corsage.

The reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Garden City.

Ministers support positive church-state separation

Government and local church officials agree on one point: the separation between church and state is positive. They disagree at what point the line should be drawn.

"It's a complex area," said Pastor Dan Wallace of United Methodist Church of Wayne. "No question about it, we favor separation between church and state. How to accept some benefits and at the same time, maintain independence is a difficult situation."

He agrees with the Supreme Court decision ruling against prayer in public schools. "It doesn't mean students can't get together and pray or share feelings about religion. Where do you separate church and state. It needs to be studied," he said.

Pastor Tony Story of Westland Full Gospel Church of Westland definitely agrees. "Thomas Jefferson talked about separation between church and state. It's also written in the Constitution and was intended to prohibit the forming of a state religion. Jefferson was not trying to keep the church out of government but keep the government out of the affairs of the church," he explained.

In reality, there is no such thing as separation between church and state, Story said. "But people use the situation to their advantage. And it works both ways. It's a touchy subject. This has been taken totally out of context. The government was established to protect the religious freedom of the citizens," he said, citing the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Rev. Pat Robertson as politically motivated church ministers.

Story too, is interested in politics and was elected in February as 15th District Chairman of the Republican party. "I do have a special interest to keep the state out of the affairs of the church. I see more Christians getting involved in the political process. Some people think churches should give up all rights. That's a farce," he said.

CHURCH CALENDAR

Monday: Grief is topic of discussion

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH of Wayne is sponsoring a series called "New Beginnings," between 7 and 9 p.m. on Monday, July 6 and 13. The program aims to assist those individuals or families who have lost a loved one. Glenn names cage coach

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Bob Killingbeck has a tough act to follow.

The former Wayne Memorial basketball star and last year's Westland John Glenn's junior varsity coach was recently named to replace Gordie Davis as the Rockets' head basketball coach.

Davis, The Associated Newspapers' choice for "Coach of the Year" after he led his club to a 21-3 overall record and a Class A district championship, stepped down after an exemplary coaching career.

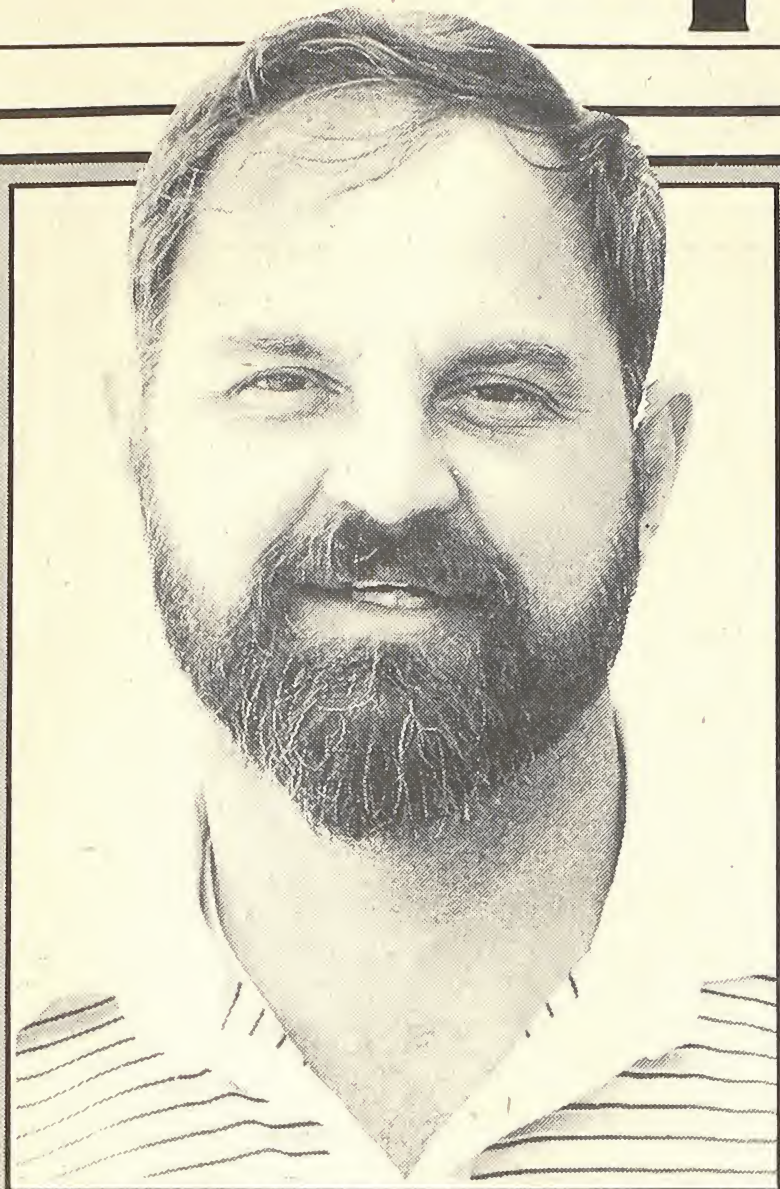

"I know it's going to be tough following Gordie," Killingbeck said. "Not only was he an outstanding coach, but a person as well. I hope I can follow in that tradition."

Killingbeck graduated from Wayne in 1964 after earning recognition in basketball and football. He was awarded his degree from Eastern Michigan University and is presently teaching Industrial Arts at John Marshall Junior High.

Last year, Killingbeck's junior varsity club compiled a 17-3 won-lost record.

Glenn players and fans won't see any radical change in game strategy, Killingbeck said.

"When it comes to basketball philosophy Gordie and I usually concurred," Killingbeck said, "and that's why

Bob Killingbeck
New head coach

we got along so well together."

Killingbeck will be inheriting the remnants of a Rocket team that finished 21-3 last year, but lost the Western Lakes Division title "by the flip of a coin." (Glenn and Plymouth Salem ended division competition with identical records and a coin flip decided which team would represent the division at the conference championship.) Salem went on to win the conference, and Coach Bob Brodie and his Rocks also picked up a Class A district crown and reached the regional finals before their season came to an end.)

Killingbeck will have back from Gordie's final team three standouts: Marcus

Lowe, an outstanding athlete who is a speedy guard; Kevin Wilson, a 6-4 junior who may be used at one of the forward spots and, because the 1987-88 Rocket model will lack height according to the new coach, may be switched to center. The third key holdover is Dave Schnepel, who could be as difficult to stop as it is pronouncing his last name.

"We don't have much height this year, so we will be going with speed."

The 40-year-old Killingbeck is married to Kathy. They have three children: Rodney, who graduated this year from Glenn (He also played varsity basketball for Davis); Casey, a 10th grader, and Julie, 12.

First call for city golf title seekers

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

It took a "sudden death" playoff last year to decide the City Championship Tournament medalist.

And the tournament champ, Michael Horn, said he felt fortunate in beating Inkster's hard-driving Kevin Ryan for the championship.

That was last year, at Hilltop Golf Course in Plymouth Township.

This year the tournament will return to the familiar environs of the remodeled and toughened Fellows Creek course in Canton Township.

"Fellows Creek has always been one of the most honest courses around," said William Hawley who has become the tournament manager for the annual affair. "It's a course that can be challenging and enjoyable at the same time."

Set up to determine the city and township championships of Wayne, Westland, Inkster, Romulus, Garden City and Canton Township, the competition is open to all male golfers in the mentioned areas. Separate city championships are conducted simultaneously for the competitors of all of the cities. However, a tournament (medalist) champ is also crowned.

Staged since 1960, some of the top amateur golfers in the state have competed in the tournament, which is sponsored by the parks and recreation departments of the competing cities and The Associated Newspapers.

The tournament is also staged to determine the low five scorers from each of the communities who will qualify to represent their cities (or township) in the state recreation golf championships scheduled for later this year. All other golfers will be designated as alternates in the order of their finish.

Golfers will also be competing for trophies that will be awarded to the top three finishers in each of the flights.

Two other prestigious trophies will also be awarded: A separate trophy will go to the medalist (low scorer) of the entire field, and the Wayne Police Department will present to the Wayne city champ the Leonard Anderson Memorial Trophy. The latter is a traveling trophy which is returned to the tournament site each year. (Patrolman Anderson was the first Wayne police officer to be slain in the line of duty).

The 36-hole, two-day tournament will be conducted Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 8-9. Golfers will play their first 18 on Saturday and return for the finals the following day.

Entries will be accepted at the city recreation offices or the Associated Newspapers

Romulus athletic director retires

9 candidates seek to fill vacancy

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Lowell Johnson, who coached some of the finest baseball players in Romulus High's history and has served as athletic director for the past five years, has brought the curtains down on 25-years of coaching and teaching "to spend more time with his family and to hunt."

Johnson, who turned 53-years-old on June 1, retired from the school district at the end of the current school year.

"It was a difficult decision to make," said Johnson on Friday by telephone from his Milan home. "And I am leaving with mixed feelings and emotions. However, I feel there is so much in life that one wants to do, and I now have the opportunity to do it."

School officials say they are interviewing a handful of candidates for the position. The athletic director is the chief administrator of the athletic department and will be responsible for numerous athletic programs and a budget of approximately $114,000.

Johnson arrived on the local sports scene in 1962 when he was appointed the head baseball coach and an assistant football coach. He served as a physical education teacher. Johnson's 1968 baseball club had outstanding success as it piled up a 17-3 won-lost record and earned Johnson the Associated Newspapers' "Coach of the Year" award.

Among some of the outstanding ball players in Johnson's lineup include Paul Seesedt, Leighton Ballard, who had a 13-2 pitching record in that 1969 campaign, and Ray Horn.

Married to Anne, who also is an educator, the Johnsons have five children, the youngest of whom just graduated from high school.

Johnson said he will spend a lot of his time traveling north where his brothers and father maintain a farm "and where I can do a lot of hunting."

"And I will probably do some consulting work for a while, and, right now I feel great (about retirement)."

"However, when the summer vacations are over and the kids start boarding buses in September to go back to their classrooms, I know I am going to have that strange feeling of 'what am I doing here'," Johnson said.

Versatile athlete Eric J. Stover was the recipient of the "Outstanding Male Athlete" award at Stevenson Junior High School. Stover (in photo at left) receives a plaque from Dennis Connolly, principal, after accepting the award. Eric also was the "MVP" in baseball, and the "Most Valuable Offensive Player" in football. The outstanding athlete will be attending John Glenn this fall. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Stover of Westland.

He's top athlete

Smith is named Huron's Most Valuable Player

Who were New Boston Huron's top athletes for the 1986-87 school year?

That question was recently answered at the Chiefs' annual awards banquet.

Mike Smith, named to The Associated Newspapers' All-Area baseball lineup, was selected as baseball's Most Valuable Player. Jeff Debozy walked away with the Most Improved award, while Cullen McKinney got the Coaches' Award.

In softball, Lauri LaBeau was the recipient of the MVP

Award, and Debbie Smith was the Most Improved Player on the Chiefs' squad, while Deanna Patterson received the Coaches Award.

Steve Bartlett got the nod as the Most Valuable in track. He had qualified for the state finals, while Paul Hill was the Most Improved and Larry Swick picked up the trophy for the Coaches Award. In the same sport, Tracy Nagy, was the MVP in girls' track; Renee Syers, the Most Improved; and Chris McAttec finished with the Coaches Award.

Finally, in girls' golf, Joy Magda, carded the Most Valuable Player Award and Denise Spodeck earned the Most Improved title.

Junior Mark Bennett of Canton, freshmen Cameron Mitchell and Thomas Rogala of Westland have earned 1987 varsity baseball awards from Alma College. They also helped the 10-2 finishing Alma Scots win their seventh Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) championship in 15 years under Coach Bill Klenk.

Bennett is a 1984 graduate of Canton High School, and he was awarded his third varsity award as a pitcher for the Scots. He is the son of Daniel and Sharon Belleville, 48655 Gyde. Mark is majoring in business administration.

Mitchell, a 1985 graduate of Wayne Memorial High School, earned his first varsity award playing the outfield for the Scots. He is the son of Norman and Doris Mitchell, 1345 Berkshire, and is planning to major in business administration.

Richard James of Belleville apparently has an enormous amount of bowling fans.

When the avid bowler sought pledges to help raise funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation, the response was tremendous, he said. James raised a record $1,531.16 thanks to fellow employees at DrawTite, the trailer hitch company, and some 120 other donors.

Bowling with the K-Mart "Strike Force" at the Super Bowl, James finished with a three-game total of 578, and each pin translated into money for the fight against the dreaded disease that usually strikes children. However, adults also are not immune to the disease.

In Olympic tradition

Belleville to host Great Lakes State regional games

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

The Great Lakes State Games are coming to Belleville.

The city will host, from July 17-19, some of the most talented basketball players in the state, if not the country. Also scheduled to see action are girls and women volleyball teams along with the junior and senior men's freestyle wrestlers.

The name of the game at the regionals will be to qualify for Michigan's "Festival of Sport" - the Great Lakes State Games - which is scheduled for July 31 through August 2 at Marquette.

"We will have some of the best basketball talent in the state who will be competing on all-star teams here, in Belleville, to compete in the sectional phase of the Great Lakes games," noted Kevin Bara, the southeast Michigan regional director for the games. "When you consider that some of the top high school talent in Detroit, Flint, Ann Arbor and Plymouth will be playing here, it's like a dream come true. If fans

"A lot of people have gotten involved to make the Games an unforgettable experience. . . the competition will be held in the highest Olympic tradition."

— Kevin Bara
— regional director

thought the state high school championships were exciting, well this should be equally if not more thrilling."

But basketball will not be the only sport that fans will view during the three-day (July 17, 18, 19) gala of sports games.

Teams representing Flint, Warren, Sterling Heights, Wayne, Westland and Livonia are slated to see action in volleyball. Junior and senior women's clubs will be battling it out at North Junior and South Junior high schools to determine which team will earn the right to compete at Marquette.

In wrestling, a freestyle tournament will be conducted for grapplers in grades nine through 12 to determine regional champions for the Marquette finals. Wrestling competition will be conducted at South Junior High School. Southeastern Michigan, including the Monroe areas, will be represented on the mats.

The top two teams in each division will earn the right to compete for state honors.

"These teams will have to finance their own way to the Great Lakes State Games," said Bara, a former All-Area pitcher from Belleville High. "It's going to be tough on some of them, so we will also be staging fund-raisers for them."

Bara said that the local games in Belleville would not be possible without the help of the Van Buren Board of Education, which has approved the use of school facilities. Also, several prominent persons including Larry Tabor (Belleville High principal), Michael Colletta (Belleville High athletic director), William Lloyd (Community Education director), James Richendollar (South Junior High principal), Bill Sparrow (North Junior High principal) and Edward Randolph (Buildings & Grounds director) were crucial in setting the stage and receiving approval of school facilities for the games.

"All across the state these games will be staged," Bara pointed out, "and, the principles of the Olympic ideals of competition have become the banner for these games. This obviously is also a major Michigan Sesquicentennial event."

"A lot of people have gotten involved to make this (the Games) an unforgettable experience," said Bara, "and I know Belleville and its citizens are happy that we have been designated as one of the hosts."

He's heading for a crash at the fair

Bob Groves will be plowing his car that looks like a reject from a scrap yard into other cars in two weeks and will be enjoying every minute of the ordeal.

And the owners of those cars won't be filing any police reports about the incident, either. There will be no reckless driving charges, moreover, as Groves shoves the gear into reverse over and over again in his individual search and destroy (the other car) mission.

How can the Inkster resident get away with all of this deliberate destruction? Well, because Groves will be among a field of 60 drivers who will be seeking $15,000 in prizes at the annual Demolition Derby staged in conjunction with the annual Wayne County Fair.

The fair will be conducted in Belleville the week of July 19, and the Demolition Derby, one of the featured attractions, will be waged in the fairgrounds.

Groves is no novice. He has been in the midst of the heated battle in other years, "and loves it."

"It's a challenge, believe me. And, would you believe it's a good way to take out some of your frustrations? You get behind the wheel and your only thought is survival. And, of course, how do you stop the other guy before he stops you."

Sounds like a lot of fun. But, when you have metal ramming metal, people can get hurt.

"I have had my share of bruises, and there were times that it was difficult for me to sit down," he said. Some 60 vehicles, stripped of all glass, and modified so that there is little danger of serious injuries to the driver, will be on the field. The competition, staged in four heats with the last two drivers of each heat meeting in the championship round, is intense. The ultimate survivor has a purse of $15,000 waiting for him.

Groves will be driving a 1973 Monte Carlo, which looks like it escaped from the scrap yard before the wrecking cranes got to it. Oh, yes, forgot to mention that there is a hole on the hood so that if the carburetor overheats and catches fire, the blaze

Clear as glass

Service is key to success

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

There are many 28-year-olds who are still trying to decide which career they want to pursue. But for Dan Kalinowski, the choice was simple: he just wanted to open up his own glass repair company and make it the best one around.

Kalinowski is the owner of Dan's Glass Company, located on Michigan Avenue, at Henry Ruff Road, in Inkster.

Dan's Glass Company deals specifically in the replacement of any type of glass, be it a car windshield, a picture window in a home, or windows that have been broken at business places.

Kalinowski said that his company is very diverse.

"We do anything in glass and mirrors. There isn't anything that we can't do", he said.

Kalinowski, who has been a Westland resident since he was 4 years old, first opened up his business back in October, 1979, when he was barely 20 years old and because he was so young, he wasn't taken seriously.

"It was difficult for me to run the business during the first few years. I often had to send some of my employees, who were older than me, out on calls, because I knew that there may have been some people out there who didn't want to deal with some 21-year-old guy who owned a business. I never had a problem with being younger than some of my employees, though. We all got along fine."

Being in the glass business wasn't something that Kalinowski had planned. According to him, he just happened to fall into it. After working in an auto parts store during his later teen years, Kalinowski decided to try his hand out at carpentry, where he learned how to build apartment complexes.

From there, Kalinowski said that he had the choice between working in a factory for the Ford Motor Company or working in a glass shop. After only one day in the factory, Kalinowski said that he was ready to work in the glass shop.

Kalinowski said that he finally reached a point where he was ready to set up his own glass repair business and so he did, working right out of his own garage. At that time, his only means of advertising was a hand-made sign out on his front lawn.

When Kalinowski realized that even building onto his garage was not enough to accommodate his business, he leased a building that was located on the corner of Merriman and Palmer.

It was at this location, said Kalinowski, that his business really began to prosper.

Dan's Glass Company remained in this location for nearly five years, until Kalinowski decided to buy the lot where his business is now located.

"My company now brings in more than half a million (dollars) a year. We serve thousands of people a year, in every capacity. Our jobs are both commercial and residential in nature."

Kalinowski said that his is a very competitive business and that, in order to succeed, his company must be willing to go the extra mile to satisfy their customers.

"ALCOHOL, DRUGS, DRIVING and You," or ADDY, is a curriculum which is being introduced to the Wayne County Intermediate School District with the assistance of Russel J. Laputo of Wayne Distributing Company, an Adolph Coors Company distributor. The curriculum was developed by the Prevention Center and has been cited as a model drinking/driving countermeasure program by the National Safety Council, as well as having the support of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Coors and its distributors are involved in a nationwide effort to support ADDY by sharing it with local high schools. For more information on ADDY, contact the Prevention Center, 250 Arapahoe, Boulder, CO 80302, or phone (303) 443-5696.

MAC'S PET SUPPLIES opened their doors three weeks ago to serve the needs of pet owners in Belleville and the surrounding area. Located at 201 South Street (1 block south of 5 Points) in Belleville, Dave and Sandy McGeary are on hand until 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. on Sunday to provide personal service for all your pet care needs.

As little as they are, babies require extra special attention. We understand that at Oakwood's Women and Children's Health Care Center. Our expert team of nurses and doctors — specialists in the care of expectant mothers and infants — is prepared to meet even the most delicate needs of newborns.

Last year, Oakwood delivered more than 4,200 babies. And other area hospitals sent us many of their high-risk infants and mothers. These patients need much closer attention, so we have highly skilled neonatologists and obstetricians on duty 24 hours a day.

In addition, we offer a wide range of services for expectant mothers—from prenatal testing and exercise classes to a birthing room that feels like home.

A new baby may be the most important reason you ever contact Oakwood's Women and Children's Health Care Center. But this type of care is only part of the full range of services we offer. Whether you're a teenager, a grandmother or anywhere in between, Oakwood can provide you with excellent health care.

For more information about Oakwood Hospital's Women and Children's Health Care Center—including tours or classes—call 593-7694. We'd like to show you what special care is all about.

For a physician specializing in women and children's health care, call our physician referral service at 1-800-543-WELL.

Flying High

Balloon festival brings several events to area

BY TERRY JACOBY
ANP Staff Writer

With the Mayflower Hot Air Balloon Festival and the traditional activities of July 4th weekend, there will be plenty of activities and events in the Plymouth Canton area.

Airplanes and pancakes will be flying at the Mettetal Canton Airport on Saturday, July 4. The event, which is hosted by Chapter 113 of the Experimental Aircraft Association, will cost $3 for adults and $2 for children under 12. A pancake breakfast will be served from 7 to 11 a.m. The Experimental Aircraft Association is an international organization dedicated to the promotion of general aviation and to provide encouragement and support for those who want to design and/or build their own aircraft. The pancake breakfast provides an excellent opportunity for people to visit the airport, meet the pilots and builders, eat breakfast, and admire the variety of aircraft.

During the balloon festival, there will be many activities for the children. The Canton Parks and Recreation will be conducting the activities, which will begin at 6 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday.

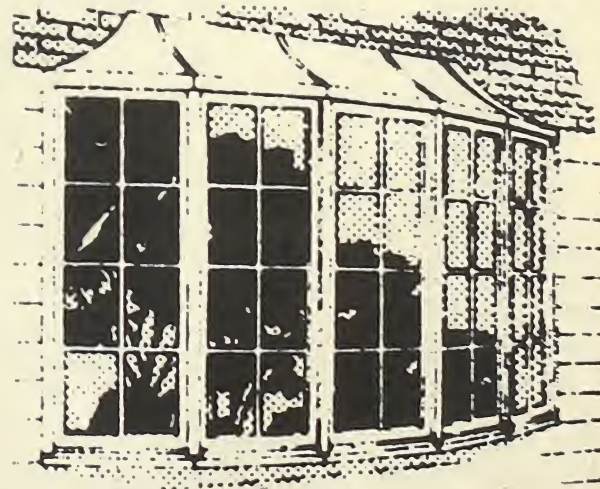

The events include; the helium balloon lift-off giveaway, parachute games, gigantic bubble making, water balloon contest, and drawings for prizes contributed by local businesses. For further information, call 397-5110.

The Plymouth Jaycees will present the 1987 Plymouth Community July 4th Parade at 1 p.m. in downtown Plymouth. The Adolph Coors Co. will sponsor a musical fireworks display show in the Plymouth Township Park. The show will include live music and a shuttle bus service from Centennial Educational Park to the Township Park. The bus service will be provided by the University of Michigan M-Care Health Centers, and will include four buses running continuously from the Mayflower Hotel to the show. The buses will run from 7:30 to 11 p.m.

Hot on the trail

Balloon chaser almost always gets her man

By SHERRY WOODARD
ANP Staff Writer

Margaret Boring of the Wolverine Lake area spends several evenings each week chasing her husband around town.

"It's fun," she claims. "You really have to keep up."

Lest anyone think the worst, Boring chases her husband in a van as he floats hundreds of feet above the earth in his hot air balloon.

Boring is proud of the fact she is a "professional chaser." A person who tracks balloons from the ground, usually doing so by following below in a truck or van.

"I've been a professional chaser for about 11 years," she said. Her husband, Gordon, is one of the aeronauts who will participate in the Seventh Annual Hot Air Balloon Festival this weekend in Canton.

The couple operates a balloon business at their home. Rides sell for $120 per person. Gordon Boring pilots the craft.

Without a chaser, however, he would be left up in the air — almost literally, Margaret Boring explained.

Balloonists need help when they land their craft, she said. A crew has to be there to pull the basket of the balloon down so that it is steady and not bouncing around on the ground.

That's called "attacking the basket," Boring said. On a more practical front, balloonists need chase crews following their flight path so that they will have a way to get themselves, their passengers and their balloon home.

While pilots rarely fly their balloons faster than 10 miles an hour, it is not a simple task to chase them on the ground, Boring said.

Case in point: "While he can fly over a lake, I will have to find a way to drive around it," she explained.

"Or he may go over some trees and there may be no roads there and I'll have to find him," she explained.

The job requires someone who can read a map and keep their eyes on the road and in the sky, the mother of two teenagers said.

It is virtually impossible to do this alone so she almost always has someone riding along with her, Boring said. Sometimes that someone is one of the couple's children, either Russ, 16, or Kerri, 12.

Having been in the business of chasing for more than a decade, Boring has established one firm rule when following balloons: "If the street name says court or lane or drive, those are usually dead ends." Avoid turning down them at all costs.

Because once a balloon gets 15 or 20 minutes ahead of you, it will be difficult to find it, she said.

Boring recalled one early evening when she lost track of a balloon.

"I didn't find them until about 11 o'clock that night," she said, remembering the event with a laugh. "The passengers weren't too thrilled with me because about 9:30 p.m. the mosquitos came out."

It is an activity where if you blink, you can lose your craft, she said.

"He could be right in front of your face and then the next thing you know he's behind a house or trees or something and you can't see him," Boring said.

Fortunately, most aeronauts fly with radios these days. But if you don't know where you are, how can you tell someone else where to find you? Boring was asked.

"Gordon will usually say something like, 'I'm going to land in a school in Milford on Commerce Road,'" she explained. Often the pilot can tell his chaser something, no matter how minor, about the area in which he is about to land.

Also there is the very obvious visual aid of the balloon itself, or the envelope as it is called, she added.

You literally follow the "bouncing balloon," Boring said. And in 11 years of following them, she has always managed to track down her chased balloons.

Balloons provide pure excitement

By TERRY JACOBY
ANP Staff Writer

What do golf and ballooning have in common? They both could be considered recreational activities. And both the golfer and balloonist try to avoid the woods.

"Ballooning is great because each flight is a challenge," said Scott Lorenz, who sponsors the annual Mayflower Hot Air Balloon Festival. "In golf, especially if you play the same course, it gets pretty routine, but ballooning has all kinds of factors which make it exciting."

Lorenz, 30, has made more than 140 flights and wants to make people more aware of the challenges and thrills of ballooning. "I enjoy it because it's different every time you go up," Lorenz said. "There is different speed and different weather, and you have to concentrate and stay alert at all times."

Gordon Boring, co-chairman of the festival, believes that ballooning is easy to get started in and it's not as expensive as people think.

"Ballooning is a tremendous family sport," said Boring, who is owner of the Wicker Basket Balloon Co. "The price of a balloon varies; it depends on the size, the artwork on the balloon and the type of instruments. We have new balloons that range in price from $13,000 to $17,000 and used ones for $7,000 to $12,000.

Boring added that the balloonist would also need a car with a trailer; an inflator fan, which blows up the balloon before the burner is ignited, and a chaser, "because the balloon never comes down where it went up."

Before a person buys a balloon, Boring believes they should get some training and hands-on experience. "They should take a ground school class and learn the rules and regulations of ballooning," said Boring. "We also recommend they go on a balloon ride before buying one." Boring offers "champagne balloon flights" for $120 per person and will refund the money toward a balloon or lessons.

"It (buying a balloon) is really inexpensive," added Lorenz. "It's like having another car or buying a boat."

Another advantage to ballooning is that a person doesn't have to be "Rambo" to fly. "You don't have to be in great shape," said Lorenz. "The most strenuous activity is packing the balloon up." Boring added, "We have people in their 70s who enjoy ballooning, the important thing in ballooning is using good judgment and anticipating what you are going to do."

A Hot Air Balloon Seminar will be held in Plymouth on August 15 and 16 at the Mayflower Hotel. The seminar, which will cost $125, will cover such topics as federal regulations, density, altitude, aeronautical charts, weather reports, equipment, duty operating practice, and mountain flying. The price includes hand out materials, classroom presentations, and loan of an aeronautical chart, circular protractor and test guides.

The seminar will be conducted by Van Stifler, who is associated with the Fort Wayne Ground Schools. Reservations are necessary and may be made by calling the Wicker Basket Balloon Center at (313) 669-4232 or by calling Stifler at (219) 747-5533.

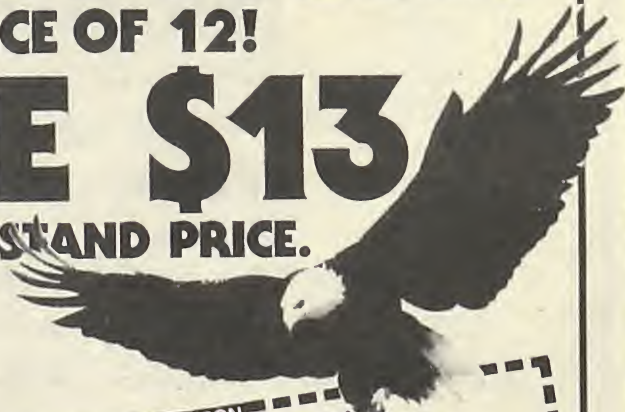

Scott Lorenz and Gordon Boring are real balloon enthusiasts.

Does not interfere with visibility

Mother Nature is balloonists co-pilot

By SHERRY WOODARD
ANP Staff Writer

Unlike airplanes, and to a lesser extent helicopters, balloons cannot fly in less-than-ideal weather.

According to balloon pilot and self-made weather expert John Raya of Utica, the ideal conditions for a flight aboard the slow-moving aircraft are steady, low winds; mild temperatures and clear skies.

"Balloons fly under visual flight rules," he said. It was for that reason that members of the press could not be taken up during a media party on June 22 at the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth. The weather that day was overcast and rainy.

"We had no ceiling to fly in," Raya said, using the jargon of balloon pilots.

That means, he explained, that the clouds were too low to the ground for balloons to fly in. By law, the balloons must fly 1,000 feet off the ground, he said. On June 22, clouds were as low as 800 feet in some places.

"Also there was little visibility" that day, Raya said, continuing to explain why he advised the pilots at the party not to attempt any flights. It is important for aeronauts to be able to clearly see all around their air space, he said. They do not want to risk running into another balloon, another aircraft or a tall structure.

But there is another more important reason why weather conditions are so important to balloon pilots, Raya said. And that is movement.

"Balloons will move to whatever air currents are in the air," he said, "up, down, left, right, whatever."

That is, in fact, the only means of steering their craft that a balloon pilot has.

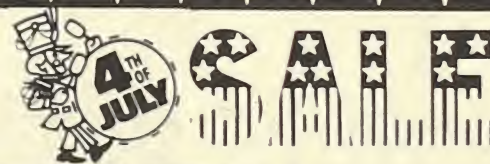

Depending on the winds, "sometimes the only movement we have is ascending and descending," Raya said.

Movement to the left or right is achieved by flying higher or lower in order to catch a breeze moving below or above the craft.

Because weather conditions are so important to balloonists, many of them have to watch what Mother Nature does like a hawk.

Most mornings Raya watches the Weather Channel cable station for about 15 minutes. He then monitors television and radio forecasts throughout the day while working at Father and Son Construction Company. By 2 p.m. he calls a special computer in order to get forecasts at various airports, he said.

That is followed by more monitoring of television and radio weather reports and when he gets home Raya contacts the Flight Service Station at Detroit City Airport.
